rehearsing death

"...for nine long months, i'd been rehearsing my death, dying a little every day, dying a little more every night..." the death sentence denies humans dignity and self worth, executing them like we execute animals. not killing proves our respect for life. the state is not above the law and only perpetuates the killing cycle, endorsing violence as the cure. not killing proves our respect for life. power is asserted over a victim, making them less equal under law. capital punishment exercises that force, reinforcing inequality.

letter to shaun

dear shaun, this may sound lame, but i want to let you know that i care very much about my "other little brother" (that's why i'm writing this.) i have always tried to be a positive role model for you and want you to get a fair shake in life, but i'm worried that you're becoming influenced by people who have no fire or passion in their lives. please don't let negative influences overcome you. you know i went through the exact same thing. look inside yourself every day and ignite your natural fire to accomplish positive goals for your life. spread your fire to them, like i hope i have to you. i am encouraging you to always try your hardest (because it will always pay off), keep your nose clean, and make every attempt to do what is right. be strong like i know you can.

every little thing counts

i'm only one, but i am one. i can't do everything, but i can do something. i'm only one, but i hope i'm not the only one. any contribution we make to our community, big or small, can make the difference in a life. every little thing counts.

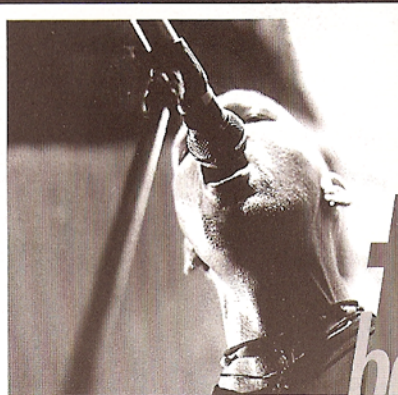

quote unquote

dropping a line to any old friends like so many dropped before, and left there... this last line is special, a present for you you caring being, a faint spark of hope at one end. rage, ignited, running. at anger's end no line exists, a bridge destroyed by me. worry not, old friend (you know who you are). it was unused by you anyway. flame progressing i reflect: rage, ignited, running. hand stretching outward. taken on convenience. mutual exchange. denied. slow realization of a one way energy flow. it lit the terminal spark...running. a small chain forged of two perfect links, a select few to add to the strength. energy fuels a two way bond. time ticks, you weren't worth mine. this anger's over, healing time is here. goodbye bridge, boom.

problem solving

when we're young they tell us the way to solve problems is by compassion and understanding and working it out (fighting doesn't solve anything and killing is wrong) and yet as we grow older, we're taught ways to problem solve using force and warfare, whose only true outcome is death. do i smell a contradiction? the only way to cure this is by continuing to teach the virtuous ways and leading by example. if i can practice what i preach, why can't they? do i smell a contradiction?

untitled [smoking song]

you pay for them to slowly kill you. scientifically engineered for maximum pleasure (addiction). hard earned dollars transferred into big hands. it finances their operations and pays for market research, so you'll stay faithful to joe camel 'till death. and you can't help it. you pay for them to slowly kill you. noone should make money off an addiction. noone should make money off killing you. the big men in suits have the money to control your most basic urges through what you eat, drink, or smoke. addiction is a big business, but it takes consumers to make business. take control and put your money where you know it should go.

when the business takes priority over the humans that created it, it's time to get out. when the government takes priority over the humans that are "served" by it, it's time to get out. profitability over human lives? re-evaluate. corporate well being over healthy soul? re-evaluate.
